SULPHONAL AND CHLORALAMID.

Daniel R. Brower, M.D. ("Medical News," April 19, 1890): "The medical profession to-day is more fortunate than ever before in the number of sleep-producing remedies. Sulphonal is a comparatively recent remedy of great value. It does not interfere with the digestion, the circulation, or the heart's action, as chloral, the bromides, and opium frequently do. We have also the still more recent remedy chloralamid. It has some advantage over sulphonal in that it acts more rapidly, and when dissolved in wine has but little taste. Sulphonal, on the contrary, probably by reason of its great insolubility, often acts slowly, its effects being more manifest the next day than on the evening of its administration. You can often administer either of these remedies without the patient's knowledge, as they have but little taste."

HÆMOGLOBIN COMPOUND.

The predigestion of foods has done much for the dietary of invalids and convalescents from acute disease or with anæmia and enfeebled digestion.

It must be admitted, however, that many cases require frequently in devitalizing diseases some efficient method of rapid nutrition, capable of ready absorption without taxing the digestive functions, to combat the anæmia.

This is furnished most naturally by the circulating medium itself—blood containing the elements of nutrition in assimilable form—and a preparation of bullock's blood, entitled Hæmoglobin Compound, has been prepared, and is now marketed by Parke, Davis & Co.

NEW WORDS.

We have been invited by a large publishing-house, who are preparing to issue a Complete Dictionary of the English Language, to send in a list of new words that ought to, in our estimation, appear in it.

Any words sent us will be gladly incorporated in a list to be sent them, and invite our readers to interest themselves in this important matter.

NOTICE.

They who read medical journals to the exclusion of the advertisements make a serious practical mistake. It is seldom that their perusal does not prompt the use of some forgotten remedy of value, reveals an address mislaid, or the superiority of some instrument.

The journal's advertisements ARE GREAT REMINDERS.

They make most journals a possibility, and it is certainly an advertiser's due that their various notices shall be read.

It is most urgently requested that the personal friends of this journal will aid its advertisers and endeavor to make them feel that their support is appreciated.
